SAE GATHERS CLOTHING FOR 'NEEDY ABROAD

A clothing drive for overseas relief, operated entirely by a group of 68 men students at Gettysburg college, has been started and to date approximately 3,000 articles have been received.

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, West Lincoln avenue, conceived the idea for the drive at a Thanksgiving banquet last week for its 68 members and pledges and the Thanksgiving holiday trips to homes produced a large portion of the articles.

Invite Public Help
An invitation to the public to participate was extended today by Paul Clouser, chairman of the drive, and Russell Kerns, co-chairman. Anyone wishing to donate clothing articles of any type is asked to phone the fraternity home, 440, and a member will call for the contributions.

The clothing received is now on display at the fraternity house. The drive will continue until Saturday, December 13.

At the conclusion of the collection the clothing will be packed and shipped to a distribution center for overseas relief. The fraternity will pay all postage to the shipping point.

The meeting was called by Joseph J. Yosko, executive director. Colonel John S. Rice, Gettysburg, president, will preside.

The purpose of the society, as incorporated in the call for the meeting, is "the dissemination of information relating to problems of government on the international, national, state and local level. Also the formation of discussion groups, where the problems that constantly recur in a democracy may be debated freely."

Slated to address the meeting are Colonel Rice, Mr. Yosko, Ramsey S. Black, state treasurer; Col. Philip Matthews, Carlisle, and Genevieve Blatt, Pittsburgh attorney and president of the Young Democrats of Pennsylvania.

Another organization meeting will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Brunswick Hotel, Lancaster. Lancaster, Berks, Lebanon and York counties will be represented. One of the speakers will be Richard S. Dillworth, who was the Democratic candidate for mayor of Philadelphia at the general election last month.

HUNTERS BAG 30 DEER ON OPENING DAY

The first reported casualty from deer hunting in Adams county resulted this morning when Blaine Hackedy, 17, son of Mr. and L. S. Hackedy, Fairfield R. D., suffered a self-inflicted gunshot wound in his left foot at 9:45 o'clock while hunting near Zora.

Hackedy is reported to have been hunting with a new rifle and, after having missed a shot at a deer, was comparing his rifle with that of a companion. He pointed the gun at his foot and it was accidentally discharged.

Hackedy was taken to the office of Dr. Ira M. Henderson, Fairfield, who rendered preliminary treatment and was then brought to the Warner hospital by Mrs. Henderson. His left second toe was struck by the bullet and another toe was injured.

The deer hunting season started off with a "bang" in Adams county's woods Monday with reports to Game Protector Leo Bushman showing that approximately 30 deer were shot by sportsmen on the opening day.

That number is "very good" Bushman said, but added that the animals killed were mostly smaller than normal. The deer, he added, are fat and sleek, but seem not to have reached the stately proportions of some of the big bucks that were shot in previous years.

Largest rack reported Monday was an eight-pointer shot by a member (Please turn to page 7)

PENSION FUND FOR POLICE IN TOWN IS VOTED

Borough council Monday night voted to establish a police pension fund for the borough after Carl Bechtel, Harrisburg, representing an insurance company, pointed out that the pension fund would be operated at no expense to the borough.

Bechtel asserted that the council would have to make the first quarterly premium payment after which the amount would be taken care of through tax money available from the state. The first payment would be repaid to council from the state funds, he added.

In addition to the amount paid by the state the policemen make additional payments either through a salary deduction plan or directly.

Drop Hospitalization

To adopt the program council passed a resolution authorizing the borough to "purchase pension annuity contracts for the payment of pension, retirement and death benefits to the policemen employed by the borough or to the dependents of each policeman." Adoption of the resolution made the borough a "participating municipality" under the provisions of Public Law 160 passed by the state legislature in April, 1945. Under the law, council pointed out, the money turned over by the state is raised from a tax on out-of-state casualty companies.

While voting to give the police force a pension plan, council also decided to drop discussions on providing Blue Cross hospitalization insurance for borough workers. Borough Engineer LeRoy H. Winebrenner reported that the highway workers stated they do not want the plan.

Councilman H. M. Oyster, who presided, then added: "Well if they don't want it, we don't want it."

No action was taken on the naming of a new policeman to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Patrolman Albert L. Wolford, with council leaving that appointment up to the new council.

REPORTS 5 CAR CRASHES AND 13 ARRESTS IN NOV.

Borough police made 13 arrests and investigated five auto accidents during November according to the monthly report presented by the Chief of Police Robert C. Harpster to borough council Monday night.

Seven of the arrests were made for motor code violations, three on drunk and disorderly charges, two for serious offenses and one on an assault with intent to kill count.

Twelve automobiles were involved in the five crashes and property damage totaled $1,265. Two bicycles were recovered and in six cases where motorists ignored parking tickets notices were sent. Ninety-four minor complaints were investigated.

$40,675 Balance

The report of the borough treasurer, John H. Basehore, also presented to council shows a balance. (Continued on page 6)

Danforth conducted a devotional period, reading from the second chapter of Matthew and concluding with a prayer.

Swope To Speak On Military Procedure

Captain Donald M. Swope will speak on the "History of Court Martial and Military Procedure" Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at a meeting of the 839th Composite Group of the U. S. Army reserve to be held at Gettysburg college.

Colonel Edward Nowicki, training officer for the group, urged all of the 60 officers and 160 enlisted men in the reserve organization to be present and added a general invitation for reserve officers of all branches of service to attend the session.

Nowicki pointed out that there is a great need for preparedness at the present time, and added that one of the best ways to be prepared to serve one's country is to take part in the training of the reserve groups.

Gettysburg Stores To Open Evenings Beginning Dec. 15

The majority of Gettysburg stores will be open evenings for the Christmas holiday season starting Monday, December 15, Mrs. Helen Snyder, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, reported Monday night at a meeting of the chamber's board of directors, following a survey of the stores. The meeting was held in the chamber's office in the Kadel building.

Beginning next week, most of the stores which ordinarily close on Thursday afternoons, will remain open all day on this day, Mrs. Snyder reported.

Directors reported that they had heard much favorable comment on the Christmas decorations and lights and on the new loud speaker arrangement which is used to play Christmas songs and carols. Both the lights and the public address system were used for the first time Saturday night.

The directors voted to extend

$1,536 ALREADY RAISED IN 'REC' CAMPAIGN HERE

A total of $1,536 has been turned in to the treasurer so far in the drive to raise $7,500 for recreational purposes in the borough according to a report presented Monday afternoon at a meeting of the Gettysburg Recreational Association board at the Hotel Gettysburg.

Among the donations listed was $15 from Miss Bertha L. Fredenburger, of Philadelphia, retired businesswoman who once came through Gettysburg and liked it so well she came here to live after her retirement. Miss Fredenburger resided at the YWCA here for some time as long as rooms were available and then moved to Philadelphia.

"So Worth While"
In a letter accompanying her donation Miss Fredenburger wrote: "It was certainly a pleasure to receive your unexpected letter and to hear of Gettysburg's Youth Recreational program. Assuredly I want to help. It is sorely needed for the youth of Gettysburg. I would much rather help in this than later on for delinquency, and all we can do to prevent that is so worth while. Good luck in the successful outcome of all your efforts. I'm thrilled you are so interested in such worthwhile endeavors."

Mrs. Henrietta Blocher, chairman of the membership committee, reported progress on the drive for individual memberships. The drive is being conducted by a number of Gettysburg high school students.

Philip M. Jones raised the question of whether an auditorium and civic center could not be built for possibly $250,000 and paid for through rental for conventions. The group will meet again next Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the hotel.

Jerusalem, Dec. 2 (AP)—Arab and Jewish mobs roamed through Jerusalem streets in attack and counter-attack today, wrecking shops, smashing windows, shooting and hurling stones in violence set off by the Palestine partition decision.

SAYS BOROUGH NOT AT FAULT FOR CULVERT, BRIDGE RISKS

Borough council was advised at its December meeting Monday night that the borough:

Is not responsible for accidents due to vehicles running into the ends of bridges or culverts.

The PUC would probably frown on establishment of a railroad crossing near the Inductive Equipment plant without warning lights.

Council could save itself $500 to $600 a year by installing its own gasoline pump.

The first opinion was presented by Borough Solicitor Eugene V. Bullitt concerning the liability of the borough in the matter of culverts or bridges over street gutters. It was presented after council had been asked for such an opinion at its November meeting. At that time Borough Engineer Winebrenner reported that he had received numerous complaints concerning drain openings and the like and that a boy had been injured on Stevens street and an automobile had been damaged on West Middle street in connection with the culverts, or coverings over street gutters.

Suggests Gas Saving
Councilman Harry Troxell and Engineer Winebrenner reported that Public Utilities commission members gave them little encouragement when they visited PUC offices concerning a proposal to establish a crossing over the Reading railroad without installing "flasher" lights.

Installation of a gas pump was suggested by Councilman George March who pointed out that the town could save 9½ cents on every gallon of gasoline if it had its own (Continued on page 2)

ANESTHESIA AND ITS USES TOLD TO ROTARIANS

The history of anesthesia and its uses was given Monday night at Rotary by Dr. Roy W. Gifford, associate surgeon at the Warner hospital here.

The number of gases and materials that can be used for anesthesia is very large, Doctor Gifford said, adding that "it could spend ten minutes just naming one after another."

American scientists and doctors have done the most work in the search for new and better anesthetics, he added, and various types have been developed for various types of operations.

Need Trained Anesthetist
"One thing must be remembered, however, in the use of anesthetics," he pointed out, "all are toxic, they are not part of what the body normally uses and as a result they must be given by a trained, competent person if they are to be used safely. And that fact is becoming more evident with each passing year as the number of types increases. Only a trained man could keep track of the new findings and determine what should be used and how it should be used."

The history of anesthesia shows many things used, with the greatest advances made during the past few years. At the time of the battle of Gettysburg the principal anesthesia used was "a good slug of whiskey," Doctor Gifford pointed out. He also termed alcohol a good anesthetic under certain circumstances when it is inserted into a nerve. Development of various anesthetics led into many by-paths. One was developed because florists discovered their

The largest outlay was $300 to the county Republican committee. Other expenses included newspaper advertising and printing.

G. Ed. Taughinbaugh, Gettysburg R. 4, spent $680.26 on his campaign to win the post of county commissioner. His largest expense was a donation of $300 to the county Democratic committee.

XMAS MEETING IS HELD MONDAY

The Women's Missionary society of Christ Lutheran church held its annual Christmas meeting Monday afternoon at the church with the president, Mrs. R. S. Saby, presiding.

"And They Brought Unto Him Gifts" was the theme of the program which was in charge of Mrs. Harvey D. Hoover, assisted by Mrs. H. C. Michael, Mrs. Ralph D. Heim and Mrs. E. S. Lewars.

Mrs. Michael gave a report of the work being done in China, particularly along medical lines. Mrs. Lewars stressed the educational program being followed in New Guinea and Mrs. Heim told of church work in Liberia. Mrs. Saby gave a report of the Women's Missionary society meeting of the West Pennsylvania conference held in Red Lion in October. Mrs. Harvey D. Hoover, who conducted the devotional period, gave a complete historical record of the Three Wise Men in the form of a travelogue.

Reports of standing committees were given and Mrs. Michael told of the study book, "Committed Unto Us," which the group will use. The society voted to send a CARE package to Japan which will be distributed by Miss Maude Powlas, a missionary serving at Kumamoto.

The names of Mrs. Richard Wolf and Mrs. Wallace Fisher were announced as additions to the membership roll.

Mrs. A. R. Wentz reported for the nominating committee and said the following officers have been renominated: President, Mrs. Saby; vice president, Mrs. E. A. Crouse; recording secretary, Mrs. Dwight F. Putnam; statistical secretary, Mrs. J. I. Burgoon, and treasurer, Mrs. Paul Spangler.

At the request of the committee named recently to draw up a constitution for the Community Chest organization in Gettysburg, the meeting scheduled for Thursday of the participating agencies has been postponed until early next month.

That announcement was made today by Dean W. E. Tilberg, temporary chairman of the group forming the Community Chest organization. The constitution committee will present its report at that meeting.

EMMITSBURG'S TAX RATE UPPED

The tax for the bond retirement fund will remain the same. The balance remaining on outstanding bonds, issued when the sewage system was installed, was shown as $4,500.

HOFFMAN ASKS NEW SEWER UNIT AND PLAY AREA

Ray M. Hoffman, retiring president of council, urged provision of a secondary unit to the sewer system and assistance in creating a better recreational center for the community in a letter read to borough council Monday night.

Unable to be present for the session, which would have been the last for him after 12 years of service, Hoffman presented a letter giving details of the development of the community during the past 12 years and urging the next council to carry out plans for the sewer and recreation center.

After stating his regret at being unable to attend the session the council president, whose term expires this month and who did not seek re-election, added:

Cites Accomplishments

"I have been a councilman for the last 12 years and you are familiar with the fact that my term expires this year, with this meeting being the last regular meeting.

"You are well aware that the borough made progress during the last 12 years on account of the cooperation of the community."

SAYS SCOUTS' JAMBOREE WAS AID TO PEACE

The 1,170 American Boy Scouts who went to the World Scout Jamboree last summer, near Paris "did a swell job as ambassadors of peace," Ronald Houck, Carlisle scoutmaster and holder of the coveted Silver Beaver award, told members of the Gettysburg Lions club and their scouters guests at the club's weekly dinner session on Monday evening at the Shelter House.

Mr. Houck, who served as a troop scoutmaster at the jamboree, displayed jamboree souvenirs, recounted incidents of the 10-day gathering of scouts from all of the nations of the world excepting Russia and showed motion pictures he made on the trip to Europe.

Both Mr. Houck and Fred Schneider, Carlisle scout who attended the jamboree, told the clubmen that the scouts returned to America with a new appreciation of what it means to be an American after their observations of life in Europe.

Scout Tells of Trip

Schneider, who told first of sight-seeing trips to Antwerp, Bastogne, Brussels and Paris, said he personally made friends with scouts of 15 nations at the jamboree.

Van Lott, York Springs, only Adams county scout to attend the jamboree, was a guest of the Lions with his father, William M. Lott, former president of the York Springs Lions club. Both were introduced. Other local scout guests Monday evening included George Griffith, local scoutmaster, and Scouts John Raffensperger, James Codori, Joe Norman, George Weiland, Arthur Aiken, Jr., and Dick Hay.

Mr. Houck and Scout Schneider were introduced by Charles Keller of the Lions club, who arranged the program.

President M. P. Hartzell, Sr., presided at the meeting with 84 Lions and guests in attendance. Richard Codori, program chairman, announced plans for a tour of the Inductive Equipment Corporation plant next Monday afternoon before the weekly meeting.

pump. Not only would the borough then be able to get gasoline four cents cheaper by purchasing it wholesale but it would also have 5 1/2 cents tax on each gallon, March said. He added that the establishment of a gasoline tank and pump to supply borough vehicles would save "about $500 to $600 a year."

Cites Oil Saving

He also added that "any gasoline company will be willing to install a tank and pump" and pointed out that "in addition to the gasoline we would also be able to obtain oil, anti-freeze and similar materials wholesale thus increasing the savings."

In regards to the trip of Councilman Troxell and Engineer Winebrenner to Harrisburg, Winebrenner reported that the traffic lights now in place in the borough "are to stay as they are until we are given notice to change. When the state orders us to change the lights they will also tell us what to do to secure new lights and what lights to install. He said that was the substance of a report made to him by the state highway department concerning the status of the present lights and the possibility of putting up additional traffic lights in the town.

Seek More Safety

Winebrenner and Troxell reported that the PUC would "more than likely" agree to any division of the cost of placing a crossing over the Reading railway that would be worked out between the borough council and the railroad. If, however, the borough petitions the PUC alone, without the railroad, then the PUC, if it follows the procedure it has in the past, would direct the placing of the crossing and place all of the expense on the borough.

"We were told that the PUC, while it has in the past approved crossings without blinker lights, is seeking more safety today and in all probability would not approve it."

"As filed with the PUC today the crossing of the Reading railroad near the Inductive Equipment plant is a private crossing."

"Private Crossing"

"According to the Reading railroad maps it is a private crossing."

That report led Councilman Oyler to inquire: "It's a private crossing to whom? We better get this straight before we go any further." Borough Solicitor Buleit was asked to find out whether the crossing is public or private and report back at the January meeting.

In his opinion concerning culverts or bridges over street gutters Buleit pointed out that "It is impossible to state as a general proposition that it is or is not negligence to construct or permit the construction and maintain said bridges."

"The law makes it the duty of a borough to maintain its streets with a surface sufficiently smooth to accommodate traffic without hazards to the traveling public. This refers, however, to the traveled portion of the street and not to the gutters, for the law recognizes the necessity for having gutters to carry away storm waters and the necessity of having these gutters bridged for permitting access to properties."

Cites High Court

After citing a Supreme Court of Pennsylvania decision stating in effect that the supreme court holds that "such bridges or coverings are not to be treated as defence or obstructions in highways," Buleit continued:

"It would seem therefore that the installation and maintenance of such bridges or coverings do not constitute negligence on the part of the borough. The same rule would apply to bridges or culverts covering inlets for discharging water from gutters into underground outlets."

"I must advise, therefore, that unless such bridges or culverts are constructed or maintained in such a manner as to make them dangerous in their normal use and in the normal use of the highways along such gutters, the borough would not be responsible for accidents due to vehicles running into the ends of such bridges or culverts." Buleit continued.

plants were "apparently going to sleep." Investigation disclosed that a gas used in the flower shops was actually "putting the flowers to sleep," Doctor Gifford said. Since then it has been used by doctors for some types of work.

One anesthesia worked very well until doctors found it highly explosive and likely to short circuit inside a patient—which caused its abandonment.

Spinals Most Valuable

Spinal anesthesia is most valuable because it makes the organs of the abdomen most relaxed, the local physician said. Thus in abdominal operations the work can be performed with the least damage.

A patient need not worry that he will come out of an anesthesia while the doctor is still working on him, Gifford added. "The doctor can tell when a patient is coming out of the anesthesia long before the patient himself can know by feeling pain. There are many signs. For example, an organ which has been relaxed will begin to function again, and that will happen long before a patient will be conscious of anything."

About 55 members attended the meeting held in the YWCA at which the president, Dr. C. Harold Johnson, presided.

FAIL TO FIND MISSING PLANE

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 2 (AP)—Hours of search in the region near the German-French border failed today to turn up a missing U. S. Army C-47 transport plane, lost since Friday with 20 persons aboard. Searchers reported they picked up radio signals, apparently from a downed craft, which said planes could be heard overhead, but no tenable clue was found by air crews or foot patrols. U. S. Air Force officials said they had "an unconfirmed report" that search planes had sighted a crashed aircraft near the old Maginot line town of Bitche. The French press agency reported early in the day that a U. S. Army transport plane had crashed near Lemberg, six miles from Bitche, but later said it was "rechecking" its information. An Associated Press reporter in the area said he could find no official report of a plane having been sighted.

Just before darkness set in, snow began falling and all search planes except a single B-29 superfortress were withdrawn. That plane flew over the area between Bitche and Pirmasens, in the French zone of Germany.

The transport was lost on a flight from Pisa, Italy, to Frankfurt.

Mules Have Five In Top Eighteen

(By The Associated Press)
Joe Carlozo, the fleet freshman from West Chester Teachers, captured the Keystone State College scoring crown, but Muhlenberg's 37-point-a-game footballers almost stole the show by placing five men in Pennsylvania's top 18.

The weekly Associated Press survey disclosed today at the end of the 1947 grid campaign that Carlozo had defeated his nearest competitor, Dan (Dusky) Towler of Washington and Jefferson, by four points, 78 to 74.

Carlozo appeared in nine games while Towler campaigned in only eight, sitting out the Carnegie Tech game with an injury.

Ed Czekaj was the top place kicker, booting 32 extra points for Penn State as well as a field goal. Norm Zwald of Lock Haven trailed with 24 while Bill Bell of Muhlenberg took third with 23 and Ray DiSerafino of West Chester fourth with 21.

Joe Howard Lost To Bullet Cagers

Bury days are listed this week for Coach "Hen" Bream and his Gettysburg college basketball candidates as they prepare for the opening game with Susquehanna university here on Wednesday evening, December 10.

A damper was put on the hopes of the Bulletts last week when Joe Howard, ex-Chambersburg high star and a letterman from the 1945-46 Bullet team, withdrew from college in order to take a position.

A number of Bullet players have been working out for some time while Monday marked the first workout for those who had been members of the football squad.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—Dumb Dan Morgan, whose nickname is the greatest understatement of any given year and who always can find an angle favoring the under-dog in any given fight, figures that Jersey Joe Walcott will give Champion Joe Louis trouble in their title bout next Friday. . . You'll notice that Dan doesn't say Jersey Joe will win. . . Here's how he looks at it: "This feller Walcott has been the best heavyweight for the last two years; He hasn't been out of shape in two years. . . No heavyweight can jab him—He wants to box and he anticipates punches and slips them by moving his head like this." (By this time Morgan was illustrating the moves Walcott would make). . . "He feints and shifts better than Billy Conn did in his first fight with Louis. He'll worry Joe." . . Dan collected his thoughts a moment then continued: "Louis is easy to hit, remember. I coached Max Schmeling before his first fight with Louis and I told him that Joe tries to jab for a round or two, then when that doesn't work, he tries and begins to hook. That when Schmeling hit him with a right—and I tell you nobody can jab this Walcott."

OFF THE AIR
After Penn State was chosen to play Southern Methodist in the Cotton Bowl football game, last Saturday's broadcast of the S. M. U. Texas Christian game became a matter of absorbing interest at State College, Pa. . . Among the listeners were backfield Coach Al Michaels and his family. . . When the score was tied at 19-19 with 30 seconds left to play and SMU's Doak Walker stepped up to try for the winning point, nine-year-old Tommy Michaels dropped to his knees and said: "I'll pray that he makes the extra point." . . "Get up," shouted Al. "If you want to pray, pray for us."

THUMB FUN

After leading the Lock Haven, Pa., Teachers' College Cross Country team to victory over Scranton, U., on a recent Saturday, Jack St. Clair hitch-hiked to Philadelphia with his teammate, Harold Borek, to run in the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. meet. On Sunday St. Clair won the junior title and placed fifth in the senior event. . . Then the pair thumbed their way back for Monday classes. . . That adds up to two firsts, one fifth and a new record for mileage.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Local Miscellany: Mrs. W. D. E. Scott, of Loysville, is visiting her mother and sister at Evergreen cemetery.

336 excursionists from Baltimore visited this place on Thanksgiving Day. They were fortunate in having Col. Henry Yingling with them, who is thoroughly acquainted with the Battlefield.

Union Thanksgiving Day services were held in Christ Lutheran church, Thanksgiving Day morning at 10 o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. H. C. Alleman, pastor, assisted by Rev. D. W. Woods, Jr., Rev. W. H. Freeman and Rev. W. A. Brown. The sermon was preached by Rev. T. J. Barkley, D. D. A collection for charity was lifted which amounted to $11.17. The attendance was fair.

Mr. J. H. Huber and family are moving into their beautiful new house, which has just been completed on Springs avenue.

The sum of $100 was cleared from the entertainment recently given by the scholars of the public schools, which sum will be applied to the payment of chairs purchased for the assembly room.

Destructive Fire at Taneytown: The town of Taneytown, Carroll county, Md., narrowly escaped destruction by fire on Friday night, and for a time it seemed as if that catastrophe could not be averted. By the assistance of the firemen of Littlestown, who promptly responded to an appeal for help, and went by special train to the scene of the fire, the fire was brought under control.

It started about 7 o'clock in the hayracking establishment of Tobias H. Eckenrode's large warehouse at the railroad, but how it originated is not known. The printing office of the Carroll Record newspaper was entirely destroyed, the saddle shop of Stanley Weaver, a house owned by Mr. Eckenrode and a large double dwelling owned by John Davidson were destroyed. Several other dwellings were more or less damaged.

The loss is estimated at $20,000.

The Adams County Teachers' Institute: The 43rd annual institute of the Teachers of Adams county convened in the Court House Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. County Superintendent J. W. Thoman called the meeting to order.

The following officers were elected: President, J. W. Thoman Vice presidents, J. Dorsey Hunter, E. W. Cook; Secretaries—Recording, Charles Richter; Assistants, Bernardina Corrigan and Eva Boyer; Enrolling, S. A. Nagle, Charles L. Baker; Corresponding, Emma Wiernan; Treasurer, Supt. J. W. Thoman.

All the teachers except two answered at roll call.

J. L. Williams, Esq., delivered to the assembled teachers the address of welcome. Professor C. M. Parker, the musical director, led the singing.

On the resolution committee the following were appointed—W. A. Bream, Wm. Storrick, Wilson Hummelbaugh, Helen Cope and Zula Deatrick.

On the executive committee were Allen Yohe, Charles Gardner, H. C. Lady, Emma Wible and Adelaide Kuhn.

M. O. Bream, Eugene Strasbaugh and E. E. Jacobs were on the auditing committee.

PLEASANT PEOPLE

We all like to meet pleasant people. They seem to be surrounded by an aroma of good will. I am reminded of a line that was engraved upon the tombstone of a young girl, somewhere in New England, I believe. It read: "She was so pleasant." What an epitaph to bear in mind and to remember!

We like pleasant people as neighbors, as companions, and as friends. It is something for each one of us to cultivate—ourselves to be pleasant at all times! At a recent luncheon I met Harold E. Stassen, the former Governor of Minnesota. I was most impressed with his open, intelligent, and kindly personality. I have no idea whether or not he will ever be President of the United States, but he is a most pleasant and inspiring man to meet and know. And I believe he would make a fine President. He is so pleasant and genuinely friendly.

There are people whom we all dislike to meet, for they are so unpleasant. I have always wondered why such people choose to be that way. It jabs them away from so much that is beautiful and worthwhile in life—especially from warm friendships.

What is so happily inspiring as pleasant surroundings with pleasant people? All of us meet unpleasant experiences, but we can hold to our pleasantness through them all, if we will but decide to do so. It pays, too, handsomely, in the end! What an asset a pleasant home is, or a pleasant office, or a pleasant hotel. A friend of mine engaged rooms in a noted hotel last summer, but they made it so unpleasant for him that he left after two days. Greedy for the most gain they overcrowded their place and the service was bad.

Some of the most pleasant people I have ever met have been in railroad trains and in steamships, while traveling. You always look for them when lonely, or away from home. For nearly twenty years I have vacationed in Canada. I like the Canadian people for they are so pleasant and hospitable. Pleasantness can be a nation's greatest asset!

The photographer says: "Look pleasant, please!" Why should he have to say that? Why shouldn't a person want to look pleasant, without an extra urge?

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Books For Christmas"

Just Folks

The Poet of the People

By EDGAR A. GUEST

EXCUSE MAKER
The dullest man can think up in the twinkling of an eye,
When he's asked to lend assistance,
Why the call he must deny.
He can rattle off excuses for not doing what he should,
And he'll add he's very sorry, for he wishes that he could.

The maker of excuses seldom wonders if he can.
He will answer very promptly, He's a very busy man.
He has all the reasons ready why he cannot lend a hand.
He is always most regretful, and he hopes you'll understand.

The useful man is different. He may have excuses good,
But he hesitates to tell them if he thinks that help he should.
And, he may be very busy and be often out of town,
But if the cause be worthy he will never turn it down.

MORE ABOUT STRAWBERRIES

Gardeners who grow a small bed of strawberries as well as farmers with commercial-sized plantings of this fine fruit should understand a few primary facts about the plant's habits and structure in order to know how to take care of them over winter and how to control and manage the plantation over summer. In this respect the strawberry plant is unlike any other food plant.

The size of the crop and quality of the berries depend largely on how many vigorous leaves the young plant produces the previous summer. This fact emphasizes the necessity of setting out plants properly as well as choosing the site wisely. Too, the matter of leaves is related closely to control of runners, and this in turn is related to methods of spacing and plant control. Here is the story of a strawberry plant in brief:

It is set out in early March soon after soil can be well prepared. It is bought from a reliable nursery and is amply supplied with roots. By the first of May from 5 to 10 leaves are in evidence. The first runner appears in late May or early June. If all the runners are retained, the mother plant will have around 30 to 35 leaves by the time cool weather comes. If all the runners are cut away, the mother plant will develop as many as 75 to 80 or more leaves by the time growth ceases in the fall.

Except in semi-tropical latitudes and climates, a strawberry plant forms all its fruit buds in the fall, none in the spring. These can be found by examining a plant at this time of the year, plants with the largest number of matured leaves having the largest number of fruit buds. By late November or early December, depending on weather conditions, these crown and leaf buds are well hardened and matured. It is at this stage that a protective mulch is applied — not before the fruit buds are thoroughly matured.

The importance of taking care of newly set strawberry plants in order to promote the formation of a maximum number of leaves is seen in this cultural fact: One plant having but 4 leaves when fall arrived produced 42 berries the next spring; a plant with 11 leaves produced 102 berries; a third with 21 leaves produced 142 berries, while a plant with 42 leaves bore 230 berries. Of course, to repeat, the number of fruit buds matured in late fall depends on the number of leaves produced during the summer and retained in vigor until the plant ceases growth in early autumn.

If plants are grown under the "hill" system by which all runners are removed, the mother plants will, with proper care, develop a maximum number of leaves and fruit buds before winter. On the other hand, if all runners are allowed to remain and form what is known as a matted-row system, numerous lateral or runner plants will develop for future bearing as well as for creating a large number of bearing plants within a limited area. And it may be added that runners potted over summer in pots plunged to their brims near parent plants will produce plants which may be shifted to beds in late August and bear fairly good crops of berries the next spring. These are known as potted runners in the plant trade.

Mulching With Soil Stops Winter Kill

Most of the shrubs planted around homes are perfectly winter hardy, but some are bound to suffer, particularly in unusually low temperatures. Abelia grandiflora is one of the first to suffer, but heaping one or two bushels of soil around the base of the plants will prevent them from being lost altogether.

The soil serves as an effective winter mulch, and even if all the

VARIED FOODS ATTRACT BIRDS DURING WINTER

There are more than fifty species of birds which remain with us during the winter, and the gardener who is interested in them not only for their company but for their value in curbing destructive insects will want to feed them during the hard winter months, writes Alfred Putz in the New York Herald Tribune.

For this purpose berry-bearing trees and shrubs often are planted freely. This food supply, however, soon becomes exhausted, and unless supplemented the birds will have to look elsewhere for their daily meals.

If one waits with feeding until the supply runs short many of the birds will seek other feeding grounds, and that is why the program should be started just as soon as severe freezing weather sets in. Once started, there always should be an ample supply in a wide variety in order to keep them coming daily.

A special bird feeder, or several of them, placed throughout the garden, can provide hours of enjoyment to the benefactor. Place them beyond the reach of marauding cats but in such a way that the food supply may be replenished with little trouble. Window-sill feeders are excellent but they do not draw the crowds as do those placed in trees or other vantage points. Those placed out of easy reach should have a rope and pulley so that they can be lowered easily for refilling. A wide roof over the feeding platform is important to keep off winter snows. The sides facing the prevailing winter winds may be either solid or covered with glass.

Placing the feeders close to trees exposed tops are killed new shoots are almost sure to rise from the covered section next spring.

or shrubs has the advantage of providing the more timid birds with a safe perch from which they can survey the situation before venturing to the food supply.

There are many different brands of commercial birdseed mixtures which are attractive to a great many species, but there are other foods which should supplement them. Of these suet is of prime importance. It provides the fat needed by the birds and, because it does not freeze solid, the birds can enjoy it all winter long. Fasten it to the trunks or branches of trees with wire or stout twine. Peanut butter is another delicacy if smeared into the bark of some rough tree. There are both suet and peanut butter seed cakes available to place in feeder racks or special holders.

Birds Need Grit

Birds also need a little grit in their diet and very fine sand should be added to the seed mixture. Raw or cooked rice, crushed corn, left-over seeds of sunflower, pumpkin and squash, as well as a little sugar or honey, add to the variety.

During very cold weather water is a necessity. If a shallow cup is filled daily with hot water the birds actually will be waiting for it to cool sufficiently for drinking. If this is done daily at a certain time they will soon know when to come for their drink. The water supply need not be at the feeding station, but it should be close enough so that the birds will become aware of it.

Even though food may be scarce, the birds still are extremely wasteful. They pick this or that seed and in doing so often make more food fall on the ground than they eat. Sometimes it appears that they do it on purpose so others too timid to come to the station can pick it up from the ground.

BIGGEST BOLT OF LIGHTNING HIT PITT TOWER

Pittsburgh, Dec. 2 (AP)—A "super" lightning bolt containing volts estimated in the millions hit the University of Pittsburgh's 42-story Cathedral of Learning on July 31, Westinghouse Electric Corporation engineers reported today.

Engineers said the charge—believed the mightiest ever recorded—consisted of five separate surges, at least one of which contained an estimated 345,000 amperes of electricity. This is equal to the current flowing into 300,000 homes.

The super-volt, Westinghouse said, was recorded on special instruments installed as part of the Westinghouse long-range research program aimed at improving design of equipment to protect homes, factories and power lines.

Caused No Damage

Dr. E. L. Harder, in charge of the research, said the bolt struck a mast mounted on the cathedral, 535 feet above the ground, and traveled simultaneously down the mast and at least two of the four guy wires that held it in place.

The cathedral itself suffered no damage because the lightning easily moved to the ground through the steel framework.

"This stroke was far beyond the measuring capacity of all recording instruments mounted on the cathedral roof with the exception of one magnetic device used for measuring such peak currents and a photo recorder, Doctor Harder said. "Our measurements and calculations indicate the current carried by the mast and at least two of the guy wires was about 115,000 amperes apiece, or a total of 345,000 amperes."

The previous high recorded in the nation, Dr. Harder said, was a stroke of more than 160,000 amperes registered in 1941 by an instrument mounted atop the 585-foot spelter stack of the Anaconda copper mining company, Butte, Mont.

THREE HUNTERS DIE ON MONDAY

Harrisburg, Dec. 2 (AP)—Three hunters died of natural causes on the opening day of Pennsylvania's annual twelve-day deer season. Two of the deaths occurred in Clinton county, and the other in Bedford county.

Clarence R. Martin, Clinton county coroner, said Aaron Zeamer, 43, of Columbia, died of a heart attack at a hunting lodge near Tea Springs, in Sugar Valley, about 20 miles southwest of Williamsport, and just across the Clinton county line.

In the same area two hunters found the body of Harvey H. Bagennose, 58, of Reading. Game Protector George Cross said there were no bullet wounds on the body, and pending an inquest by Coroner Martin said death was probably due to a heart attack.

The third death was that of Irvin Levi Shaffer, 74, of Johnstown, R. D. 1, who died of a heart attack while deer hunting in West St. Clair township, near Alum Bank, Bedford county.

Reports from various parts of the state indicated that deer was plentiful and the opening day kill was expected to near record-breaking figures.

Send Carload Of Apples To England

Chambersburg, Pa., Dec. 2 (AP)—A freight carload of 600 bushels of apples started for England today, a Christmas gift of the Franklin County Horticultural society to the children of Southampton, England.

The gift resulted from the visit to this central Pennsylvania town on last Memorial Day of Reginald J. Stranger, wartime mayor of Southampton.

Stranger came here then to pay tribute to Sgt. Paul S. Shimer, of Chambersburg, who was the millionth American soldier to pass through the port of Southampton during World War II. Shimer was later killed in action and Stranger paid a visit to Shimer's widow and young daughter keeping a promise to the soldier he would come to Chambersburg after the war.

During the Memorial Day ceremonies the Horticultural society promised to remember the children of Southampton with a carload of apples to reach there before Christmas.

Chapter 15

"The way I figure it, this guy Dawson done the squealing," said Rocky McGann, as he toyed with a pair of brass knuckles. "He leaves the Biarritz and the cops hit the joint fifteen minutes later. Now they got the head man and twenty of the boys in the can. Looks like we ought to take some measures, huh, Chimp?"

Dominic "Chimp" Rosario, six feet, three inches of brute brawn and habitual bewilderment, frowned heavily at his small, dapper partner, indicating that a thought was struggling for a precarious anchorage in his mind.

"Yeah, Rocky, yeah," he agreed after an interval of intense concentration. "That must have been it." "Sure that was it, you big dope," said Rocky scornfully. "Ain't I been tellin' you? The point is, are we gonna just sit tight and let Dawson get away with it?"

"Naw, Rocky," Chimp agreed. "But the head man's in the pokey, like you said. And we ain't had no orders..."

"Orders?" Rocky was furious. "You gotta have orders, you big cluck? Wanna be a small time punk all your life? Listen, if you figure to get some place in this racket, you gotta hit while the iron's in the fire, see?" He put his arm around Chimp's shoulder like a father forced at last to admit that Santa Claus was a myth. "The head man's in the pokey, see? None of his hot shots can help him, on account of they're in with him. So we got a chance to do him a big favor and get ourselves in solid, like concrete."

Chimp weighed the matter in a deep but slowly-dissipating confusion.

"Sure," Rocky resumed, pressing his argument. "The head man'll pay off big for a favor like that; maybe he'll even give you that bookie joint in Jolsey you always wanted!"

"You think so, Rocky?" Rosario asked eagerly.

Rocky nodded.

"Sure, Chimp—no doubt about it." He took a long look at the $200 wrist watch he had recently obtained from a friend going out of the jewelry business in great haste. "It's 12:30 now; we can catch Dawson in his office about 2:30. Then we'll scam out of there and lay low in the hideout until the heat's off."

McGann and Rosario had completed their plans by the time they reached the TN offices. Both of them carried large fiber envelopes addressed to "Charles Dawson, City Desk"—that being McGann's idea of an effective entree.

The elevator operator, who had learned to expect almost anything in the way of early-morning messengers, obligingly pointed out the direction of the city desk.

Dawson was not so gullible. Ever since the raids, he had feared some type of reprisal from the gambling mob. He and Jean were alone at their end of the office when McGann and Rosario appeared in the hallway. Dawson, seeing them first, almost leaped from his chair and ran toward a fire exit stairway.

Rocky, recognizing his fleeing victim, shouted to Rosario as though he were a bird dog:

"There he goes, Chimp! Go get him and keep him in the stairway. I'll be right after you."

McGann, whose calculations had not included the presence of Jean Saunders, ran to the city desk. Jean had begun to pick up a telephone, suspecting the purpose of their visit.

"Put down that phone, sister," Rocky ordered, his hand grasping the pistol in his coat pocket.

Jean put down the phone, her hand trembling violently. McGann looked at her with undisguised annoyance.

"Wouldn't you know there'd be a dame to louse things up," he said sourly. He motioned with the gun in his pocket. "Okay, sister. I ain't leaving you here to get the whole office on our necks. Get going!"

"But why?" Jean demanded, despite her terror. "I don't even know what this is all about!"

"Well, I ain't running" any quizzical. McGann said, jabbing her with the pistol muzzle. "Shut up and get going!"

Jean, wanting desperately to scream, opened her mouth a little. McGann read her intention immediately.

"One peep out of you, Blondie, and you get this gun over the head!" He prodded her back with the pistol and she moved ahead of him, in a kind of terrified trance, to the stairway. On a landing two floors below, they found Rosario and Dawson rolling around the floor, with Rosario on top. His long, thick arms swinging savagely, he pounded Dawson's face repeatedly with a set of brass knuckles clamped on his right fist.

"Stop, stop!" Jean called out involuntarily. "Don't, you'll kill him!" Chimp looked up in stupefied wonder.

"A dame! What's the idea, Rocky?"

"Don't ask dumb questions," McGann told him caustically. "Give that guy another wallop and put him out."

Chimp swung the brass-knuckled fist with crunching force against Dawson's chin. He ceased to resist, his head falling back against the floor.

Suddenly the stairway was filled with the measured clang of a loud bell—the automatic system, working by photo-electric cells, which rang when anyone passed certain points on the stairway at night.

"We've set off the damn firebell!" Rocky said, cursing. "We'll have to scam fast. Pick up that guy, Chimp and I'll bring the dame; we'll beat it out the side door to the car."

"But—but that's kidnapping," protested Chimp.

"If we turn this dame loose now, it's suicide. We're takin' her with us; we can handle Dawson later."

He prodded Jean down the stairway while Chimp, still grumbling bitterly, followed with Dawson slung over his shoulder.

Chapter 16

Harry Hawkins had not seen Jean for twenty-four hours, and his longing for her grew more intense as the evening advanced. He wanted to call her during the day, but had deferred it, feeling that he did not want to interrupt her sleep.

At midnight, making his rounds of the night club shows he had not reviewed since the gambling club investigation began, he stopped to chat with the big, bluff Irish doorman at the Old Dominion cafe on East 63rd street.

"Good evenin' to you, Mr. Hawkins," he said heartily. "Fine to see you around this way again." He paused, took off his peaked cap and scratched his head. "Say, there was some fellow around here about a half hour ago askin' me if I'd seen you. He was a big, solid-built man with a black snap-brim hat."

"Did he give you his name?" Hawkins asked.

"That's the funny thing, now," the doorman said. "I'd just got done tellin' him you wasn't here and I turns to open a taxi door. The next time I look around, the fellow's gone!"

"Probably just some press-agent or song plugger," Hawkins commented. "Thanks anyhow, Pat."

He would have given the matter no further thought that night if he had not happened to notice a tall, heavy man in a black hat standing in the shadows as he reached his next stop, the Continental Room. Hawkins looked intently in his direction, but the lounge, appearing not to notice him, turned his face in the opposite direction.

"Friend of yours, Mr. Hawkins?" asked the doorman as he observed Hawkins looking toward the man in the black hat.

"He looks a bit familiar," Hawkins said carefully. "But I guess it's just a coincidence."

"I could go over and attract his attention," the doorman volunteered, eager for a tip. "Maybe he wants to see you; I've noticed he's been around here for about fifteen minutes."

"Thanks; I don't think I'll bother right now," Hawkins said. "I've got so many stops to make tonight I can't afford any time out." He walked into the night club, wondering vaguely if the man in the shadows bore any relation to the anonymous threats he had received by telephone the previous day.

"That gambling mob's too smart to bother a newspaperman," he decided finally. "They're in enough trouble now, without getting all the publishers down on their necks."

But as he watched the floor show at the Continental Room, taking notes for his review, he began to think along another track.

"If Dawson's really in deep with that mob," he reflected, "They might think he tipped us off about those raids. That could mean plenty of danger—and it might involve Jean." He berated himself for not realizing the danger earlier. Leaving the table quickly, he picked up his hat from the pretty blonde at the check room and walked briskly toward the exit.

It had begun to rain slightly, and even the most strenuous whistling by the doorman failed to locate a taxi. Hawkins tossed him a quarter and decided to walk the three blocks to Trans-American News.

"I've got to warn Jean about this business without frightening her," he told himself as he walked along the darkened streets, trying to find suitable words for his warning. He was so absorbed in the problem that he did not notice the man in the black snap-brim hat step out of the doorway and follow him at a distance, moving closer to the fronts of the buildings, so that his silhouette would not be outlined against the street lights and neon signs behind him.

Striding along at a rapid, even pace, Hawkins reached the street adjoining the TN offices in a few minutes. The man behind him, however, had narrowed the distance between them without being seen by Hawkins.

Hawkins had reached the middle of the block, wrapped in the semi-darkness that obscured the outlines of its buildings after the last cafes had turned off their lights, when a voice addressed him from the gloom:

"What's the hurry, Hawkins?"

The words came from directly behind him. Hawkins turned with a catlike speed, but he could see only a large, indistinct figure. The figure moved nearer. Hawkins crouched, doubling his fists.

"You and Dawson figured you pulled a fast one by tipping off the cops," said the man in the black hat, who now emerged from the heavy shadows. A great scar marked his left cheek. "Well, you ain't getting away with it." He jumped toward Hawkins, his hand swinging a dark, blunt object toward Hawkins' head.

Hawkins sidestepped, pulling his head to one side as he had learned to do in college boxing. He felt a tearing pain in his right shoulder, as the heavy object crashed down on it. Despite the pain, he shot out his left hand, grabbing the thug's wrist. Bracing himself, he gave a mighty backward tug as he pulled the attacker toward him. He stuck out his foot, catching the man's ankle as he plunged forward.

The thug went down, his black hat rolling off on the sidewalk. He kicked viciously at Hawkins' stomach as the latter lunged toward him but Hawkins again sidestepped and the kick missed. They were tangled in a heap on the sidewalk when a police siren sounded in the dark street.

"Cripes," the thug cried. "Lemme out of here!" He attempted to wriggle loose, but Hawkins pinned his wrists against the sidewalk and sat on his chest.

The searchlight of a police car picked up the struggling figures on the sidewalk and two patrolmen jumped out with guns drawn. Hawkins identified himself and described the attack as the thug climbed slowly to his feet with a patrolman's gun trained on him.

"A lucky thing for you," said the other cop to Hawkins. "We'd never have been here, if we weren't on our way to your office. We just heard that two of the editors were kidnapped by some mugs; a girl was one of the victims."

ULTRA SOUND WAVES FATAL

Fort Monmouth, N. J., Dec. 2 (AP)

—Army engineers, experimenting in supersonics, have developed an ultra sound wave, beyond the range of the human ear, which kills mice and insects left in its path.

The Signal Corps announced Saturday the lethal properties of the wave, which it said also had effects on humans ranging from loss of sense of equilibrium to dizziness. White mice placed in a sound field, died one minute after exposure to the wave. Autopsies showed death resulted from heating produced by the wave, but there was no obvious damage to organs of the slain mice. Mice subjected to the irradiation for only 30 seconds survived.

Scientists working on the project did not expose themselves to the direct beam. They wore ear-plugs, but found it difficult to avoid exposure to the radiated sound, which had effects ranging from dizziness to loss of sense of equilibrium. The army statement said it was difficult to put objects into the sound field or to retrieve them, without encountering burned fingers and hands.

"The experiment afforded results of more than biological interest," the army said, "giving some indication that the method might be employed in the study of pest control." The announcement made no mention of any possible use of the ultra sonic death wave in warfare. The common roach, firebrats, yellow fever mosquitoes, blow flies, meal worms and caterpillars, were among insects killed by sonic wave heating.

will try to create

A GAS SHORTAGE!

Severe Cold Weather Doubles the Demand!

Today, more than ever before—people depend on gas for home heating, cooking, water heating and refrigeration. This unprecedented demand keeps gas supply lines loaded close to capacity even in normal winter weather. Should we become the victims of severe cold weather this demand will jump to almost double . . . and gas pressures in the lines could reduce to dangerously low levels.

Your GAS COMPANY is doing Everything Possible!

Long ago we anticipated the grave possibilities of a gas shortage this winter. We rushed through an expansion program involving an expenditure of 12 million dollars to increase our distribution and gas storage facilities. Some of this work has been completed . . . but much has been delayed by a critical shortage of vital materials. To conserve the existing gas supply we restricted new gas heating installations. But we still must ask your help. Please co-operate with us by conserving gas wherever you can.

Here's How You Can Help!

1. Please don't use your gas range to heat your kitchen.

2. Do your washing some other day than Monday.

3. Set your furnace thermostat at 68°—still lower at night.

4. Shut off rooms not in use—particularly attics and second floor bedrooms.

5. Don't use gas room heaters to supplement your furnace.

6. Use hot water sparingly—don't keep it running needlessly.

7. Install storm sash and insulation—your savings on heating bills will amaze you.

EXPLAINS HOW MEYERS MADE BOND PROFITS

By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, Dec. 2 (P)—Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers said he made money speculating in war bonds. Others did it, too, How?

It wasn't illegal. There was no law against it. But the government tried to keep it from happening.

Meyers told the Senate's war investigating committee he had bought as much as $4,000,000 worth of bonds on margin and made a paper profit of $90,000.

Anyone with money to invest, a desire to speculate, and the knowledge of going about it, could have done the same thing.

Not Popular Issues
The regular war savings bonds—the E, F and G bonds which most people bought—were not mixed up in these deals.

That's because they were not negotiable; you couldn't sell them to anyone. If you wanted to cash them, you had to turn them into the government.

But the E, F and G bonds were not the only ones the government sold in its eight bond drives to borrow money to pay for the war. It sold other kinds of bonds to people who wanted to invest their money for the interest they could get.

In Big Demand
These other bonds varied and had different names. One type was called simply Treasury bonds. Meyers dealt in those. Individuals could buy these Treasury bonds and, sometimes, sell them to someone else at a profit.

The government sold about $67,000,000,000 worth of these bonds. The interest on them was 2 to 2½ per cent a year for about 10 years. If you bought one of those bonds for $10,000, and the interest was 2 per cent, at the end of 10 years you'd get back $12,000.

The bond never went below the price at which the government sold it—in this case $10,000—because the government backed it. You could always get back your $10,000, plus interest.

Since they were such sure investments, and paid that 2 per cent interest, there was a big demand for them. So some people bought and sold them to one another, and because of the demand, the price sometimes went up. For example:

Jones bought a $10,000 bond. If he held it for 10 years, he'd get back $12,000. But Smith figured he and Jones could both make a profit on it.

Some Bought On Margin
So he bought the $10,000 bond from Jones for $10,100 (a quick $100 profit for Jones). Smith held it 10 years and got $12,000 for it from the government (a $1,900 profit for Smith).

Jones was willing to sell to Smith and be satisfied with a 1 per cent profit right away instead of waiting 10 years to make a $2,000 profit.

That was one way of dealing in the bonds but in the case just cited Jones and Smith both had done their dealing with full cash.

Other people, like Meyers, didn't have enough cash to pay in full for the bonds they wanted to buy. So they bought on margin. This meant they might put down a certain amount of a bond's full price and get a bank or someone to back them for the rest.

TAFT-HARTLEY ACT TESTED

Harrisburg, Dec. 2 (P)—Constitutionality of a provision of the new Taft-Hartley act was involved in a motion filed by the Gettysburg Furniture company to dismiss an action recently brought in U. S. District court in connection with a labor dispute.

The provision under question by the furniture company concerns that section of the law giving Federal courts jurisdiction in all suits charging violation of labor contracts.

The action was brought by the AFL—Upolsterers International union, Local 466, asking the court to order the company to abide by a contract.

In seeking dismissal of the action the company contended that Section 301 of the Taft-Hartley act, by giving the Federal court jurisdiction over such matters "extends the powers of the Federal district court beyond the limits placed there by Article 3, Section 2, Clause 1."

The dispute arose over the dropping of Walter Reynolds as an employee on May 27. The company, through a spokesman, insisted that Reynolds had been dropped for refusal to do work assigned to him and for that reason there was no reason to meet with union officials and arbitrate the matter.

George Hafer, of Harrisburg, attorney for the company, said no time has been fixed for hearing argument on the furniture company's motion.

PICKETS BOOKIES

West Chester, Pa., Dec. 2 (P)—Pete DeBlasio, 30, paced up and down in front of a cigar store here yesterday carrying a sign bearing this announcement: "They are running a horse betting place. Close them." Friends said DeBlasio has lost $2,700 in recent months.

The Little Red Schoolhouse

By DR. ROBERT A. BREAM

Your recent articles dealing with the Little Red Schoolhouse have been of special interest to me because of my close association with the Adams county schools during the past five years.

The great majority of people born and raised in Adams county have sentimental attachments to one or more small rural school. I myself have fond memories of attendance at three of them—Mt. Vernon school in Mt. Pleasant township, Pine Run school in Hamilton township, and Glenwood school in Highland township. I taught McCleary's school in Freedom township, and, in the past five years, have visited all the schools in the county.

However, a too sentimental attachment to "The Little Red Schoolhouse," together with a nostalgic belief in its magic efficiency, presents a real hazard to a school district in keeping pace with the changes in the world today. We may be justly proud of this far-famed institution without forgetting that the ground for our pride is the fact that in the early days of our history under extremely difficult pioneer conditions we still kept some kind of school. That kind of school was good enough for its time. Is it good enough today? For the country as a whole, this issue was fully debated twenty to thirty years ago. The verdict then was in favor of a more efficient type of school organization.

Three R's Not Enough

Parents, school directors, and teachers today want their pupils to be prepared for more complete living. The fundamental skills (the 3 R's) are more important than ever before, but they are not enough. Our modern schools must also teach the essentials of good health and nutrition; they must help pupils to find a vocation suited to the special talent of each individual; they must guide pupils into the worthy use of leisure time.

They must inspire spiritual and aesthetic goals; they must help pupils to adjust themselves to a complicated social and economic society; they must aid pupils to become better consumers as well as more efficient producers; they must, by precept and example, teach the principles of the democratic way of living; and finally, they must develop in pupils the ability to take their place in a new and better world order to the end that civilization and human progress may continue on the earth. The little red schoolhouse with its limited facilities, its poor equipment, and its one teacher, can rarely offer an adequate program for complete living.

Progress Is Recent

While social and industrial conditions have been changing; while improved machinery, communications, and scientific farming have been enriching country life, most one-room rural schools in Adams County have, until recently, made but little progress. For the first time this year, the great majority of districts operating rural schools have taken definite steps to provide better educational advantages to their pupils.

All districts except Cumberland, Freedom, Germany and Liberty have assigned fewer than eight grades to each room. One rural district, Conewago, has actually achieved the ideal of one grade per teacher for the first four grades. This step is important because those schools with fewer grades will have a chance not only to teach the fundamental skills more effectively, but also to spend some time on the vital problems of living mentioned above.

Those schools with fewer than eight grades can more fully benefit from the health examinations and the nursing service; the nutrition program being sponsored by the American Red Cross; the Bookmobile service provided by the Adams County Free Public Library; and the special units developed by the teachers at the County Workshop conducted this summer at Biglerville.

"Tragic Mistakes"

The great majority of men and women who have come out of the little red schoolhouse have made tragic mistakes due to gaps in their program of instruction. They apparently learned little, for example, about the conservation of natural resources. All over America our priceless resources have been wastefully exploited. The grandchildren of the pioneers are now feeling the pinch in the form of the exhaustion of the soil, the trees, the oil, the coal, the lead, copper and tin. Apparently the early schools failed to give the vision and foresight needed to avoid the most disastrous wars the world has ever known. They also failed in their supreme duty—the development of the type of thinking and action required to keep our local, national and international machinery operating with a reasonable degree of smoothness.

We accept the ideal of equal educational opportunity for our children but we fail to provide anything like equal facilities for our rural children. Yet we ask them to live and work in the same world with children whose parents have insisted on the best type of training. Our schools can no longer be content to produce a great man here and there; they must be prepared to help every boy and girl to develop his or her abilities to the utmost.

It is argued that many of our greatest men got their formal education in a one-room school. But it is likely that the school was the cause of their greatness? Would these men not have achieved distinction if they had never been to school at all—or even if they had been to the most modern of schools?

Many of our great business and political leaders have shown a narrowness in social vision that has caused serious repercussions in our whole economy. Their meager background in the small school did not prepare them for their social and economic responsibilities in an industrialized and highly interdependent society. How many millions of human lives might have been saved and what suffering might have been spared by providing broader schooling fifty or one hundred years ago?

Composite Picture

The appearance and conditions surrounding many one-room schools do not encourage better living or social leadership.

While no single one-room school fits the following description, the writer has observed every one of the features listed in his visits from school to school in the past five years. Some one-room schools are well kept and efficiently operated, but all too frequently an ugly box of a building, long in need of repair, stands out bleakly in the middle of an unkempt lot. Seldom is any attempt made to beautify the patetically small playground or to provide play apparatus for the children.

Water is supplied from a dirty well or is carried from a neighbor's well in open containers. If a common drinking cup is not used, individual cups are kept under conditions that are anything but sanitary. Colds and other diseases spread like wildfire. Toilet facilities are in the yard with separate shacks for boys and girls opposite each other. At certain schools conditions are unbelievably revolting.

The outside door of the school opens directly into the classroom. The lock or latch is frequently broken. The children's hats, coats and lunches are stacked on windows or desks or hung on nails around the wall. Overshoes are frequently worn all day to save the trouble of removing them. The floor needs a good cleaning. An old torn dictionary lying on a broken desk looks as if it had never been dusted. An old atlas and a torn map are sticking through the book case door.

A patch of plaster has fallen from the ceiling and has been brushed into a pile at the foot of the blackboard. Discolored spots on the ceiling indicate that the roof leaks. Let us hope that the rest of the plaster falls at a time when the children are not in the building! The woodwork has become blackened by a leaky stove pipe. The blackboard is so high on the wall that the little children have to stand on benches to reach it.

Other Criticisms

A picture of Lincoln with the glass broken is hung high under the ceiling. A wrinkled and faded picture of Washington has slipped askew. There are no other pictures, but sometimes there are colorful drawings made by the children. A stove

In one corner of the room is surrounded by a ventilating screen, but the temperature varies by twenty degrees in different parts of the room on a cold day.

Children have colds all winter. Narrow windows stretch down both sides of the room but unless the sun streams in, it is too dark to read in the center of the room where the beginners are seated.

Most one-room schools do not get janitor service. The teacher, with what help she can get from the pupils, must keep the school room clean. The children track in a lot of dirt, making it nearly impossible to keep the place in good order in addition to her hard teaching schedule. Either the housework or the teaching may suffer as a consequence.

One assumes at first sight that one teacher should be able to manage 30 pupils. But consider that in the group there are children doing the work of every grade, and some the work of several different grades, and some special work.

Special methods must be used for some children. Recitation periods must be very short. The pupils must be left for long periods to study lessons (or just sit) without help or direction, except for the few seconds that the teacher can steal between recitations. The teacher is kept jumping from one lesson and one grade of children to another with a rapidity that is bound to make for mechanical work. The real problems of living have little chance for consideration in a situation like this.

tion of the burgess and different members of council and the collaboration we had.

"Twelve years ago the borough was borrowed to its capacity and owed $45,000 to different banks, as well as borrowed money that was in the Eichelberger and Stahle funds.

"Today the borough owes no money to the banks. It has repaid the money borrowed from the Eichelberger and Stahle funds. It has $45,800 in cash and $15,000 in government bonds in the general account. During this period taxes were reduced despite the increased cost of operation and higher costs of materials and labor.

Cut Town Debt

"Twelve years ago the borough had $80,000 in bonds outstanding to be paid over a period of years out of the special fund. Today there are $34,000 in bonds outstanding and a bank account of $17,000 and $15,000 in government bonds, approximately securing the amount of outstanding bonds.

"It is realized that the borough will have to provide a secondary unit to the sewer disposal plant, provide new and additional traffic lights for the safety of the public and should help create a better recreational center for the welfare of the community.

"All this can be done without raising taxes if the new members of council will cooperate with the experienced members and the new council apply the same business principles as heretofore.

Hoffman's was one of two "farewells" presented to council. Councilman Harry Troxell, who also will retire from council this year stated his appreciation of the aid he was given in his duties by the other members and praised them for their work during the past six years.

H. M. Oyler, who presided Monday night, thanked both Troxell and Hoffman for their work on council in the name of the other members of the board.

commander of the 22nd district at a meeting held recently at Littlestown. Past Commander Alexander of Dry Run post was named as finance officer for the district. Walter Metz, Chambersburg, who was vice commander of the district will be named as district deputy replacing Geiselman.

Harry Ridinger, state membership committee members, reported that the 22nd district was fourth in the state at the recent membership round-up, ahead of Philadelphia, Scranton and other more populated areas. He urged the securing of more members prior to January 1 and the setting of a goal of 2,000 members for the local post by July 1.

Elected New Members.
Elected members of the post were John Howard Candioti, Lamba Chl Alpha house; Russell Eugene Black, 311 York street; Robert Joseph Henry, 131 Fourth street; Robert Eugene Kitzmiller, 51 Breckenridge street; Roland Lee Hankey, Gettysburg R. 3; Douglas Millard Kauffman, Fayetteville and Theron George Claiborn, Taneytown R. 2. Walter Doud was transferred from the Harrisburg post of the Legion to the local post and Fred Trimmer was reinstated as a member.

A $10 donation to the Chamber of Commerce for the Christmas lights fund was voted, as were $5 for the Adams County Free Library and $10 for the Gettysburg Civic Nurse association.

Commander Marvin Socia presided with 75 members present.

Refuse Weighing Fee.
C. M. Wolf reported he has been weighing trucks for the state police and asked that the borough pay him a fee for rendering the service. Council decided it could not pay such a fee.

Burgess C. A. Heiges reported that "two cars a week on an average are dropping into the pitter in front of the M. A. Hartley building, Carlisle street. I think the state should do something about it, since the state controls Carlisle street, and I think council should take the matter up with the state highway department."

Winebrenner reported that the local state highway superintendent said he would "take the matter up with Harrisburg."

The safety committee was authorized to pay postage for the police department after Chief of Police Robert C. Harpster reported he had been paying postage for the past several months.

To Lay Sewer Line.
Winebrenner was given permission to purchase a truck load of tar for the borough highway department and to start installing a sewer along the Taneytown road in the section recently added to the borough.

He sought borough approval of the placing of the sewer line along the Taneytown road in order to keep his present highway crew together. Termining his present men, "the finest crew we have ever had," the borough engineer added that "we need the work in order to keep the men busy throughout the winter. If we don't have work they will seek other employment and then we will have to start all over again to develop a good working group. The question of course is how much snow we have, and how much other work we have. If I have permission to place the sewer we can go ahead with that when we run out of other work. We might get it started this month, or we may not get to it until next year." He estimated the cost of placing the sewer at about $2 a foot, and added that about 500 feet of sewer will have to be placed along the road.

Free Mother Until Trial For Forgery

Harrisburg, Dec. 2 (AP)—U. S. District Judge John W. Murphy placed the mother of 15 children in the custody of her attorney today until she is brought to trial in Federal Court on a charge of forging money orders.

The woman, Hilda Thome, of Lebanon county, pleaded innocent after an FBI agent told the court the charge was brought after two money orders sent through the mail had disappeared and one of them later turned up in the First National Bank in Lebanon.

"Mrs. Thome," the agent told the judge, "was the one who went to the postoffice to pick up the mail."

Judge Murphy named Earl Meiman, of Harrisburg, as her attorney and turned her over into his custody. The trial was set for Thursday.

NEW WEAPONS HINTED IN NEW HIGHLY SECRET ATOMIC TESTS

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—Projected atomic tests behind a curtain of absolute secrecy in the remote Pacific suggested today that American scientists may be preparing new weapons based on the same terrible power as the atom bomb.

A terse announcement from the Atomic Energy commission disclosed that the armed forces are making tiny Eniwetok atoll—1,500 miles from the nearest large land mass—into a closed-off proving grounds for research on "new fundamental data."

What goes on there, the commission said, is expected to result in advances in "peaceful as well as in military applications of atomic energy."

Asked whether a reference to "atomic weapons" means that this country's arsenal now includes a nuclear fission running mate for the atom bomb, one official replied: "You can draw your own conclusions."

Unlike the surface and underwater atom bomb tests at Bikini atoll in the summer of 1946, which were covered by several hundred reporters and foreign observers, the new experiments will be under "full security restrictions," last night's announcement said.

The area will be shut off from the world and the Security Council of the United Nations will be notified to this effect, as provided in the U.N. trusteeship agreement for the former Japanese-occupied islands.

"Reasonable Development" The 145 native inhabitants of the atoll islands of Aomom and Biljiri will leave for a permanent new home which they will select.

Eniwetok has about 2 1/2 square miles of land. One big reason for choosing it, the announcement explained, is its isolation. There are hundreds of miles of open seas "in the direction in which winds might

After the Bikini tests there were reports of unusual radio-activity, never officially confirmed, as far away as France and the west coast of the United States.

Senator Brian McMahon (D-Conn.), a member of the Senate Atomic Energy committee and author of the Atomic Energy act, told reporters: "The start on construction is the natural, reasonable development of atomic energy in view of world conditions today and the refusal of the Russians to accept a good plan for control."
